

IF ONLY I HAD ...

Rob Burakowski

Architect Rob Burakowski, of Mackenzie Architects, initially wanted to be a pilot. When colourblindness put an end to that ("I'd probably have ended up landing a plane on the Hume Highway," Rob jokes) he turned to engineering, and then architecture. Rob finds architecture more challenging and more rewarding and says he strives for purity of design. "The cleaner the better," he says.

Envirocycle I'd like something that is more efficient with the re-use of greywater and sewage.

● Envirocycle 10NR ultraviolet wastewater treatment system, from $6900 plus transport, from envirocycle.com.au

Aeroplane

I'd love a Mustang P-51 to rebuild. It was a World War II fighter plane, and something I'd like to tinker with.

● American P-51 Mustang with complete logbooks, from $1,800,000, from mustangsmustangs.com

Motorbike An MV Augusta F4 312 is something that would clean out the cobwebs. It'd be very relaxing to ride and leave me with a clear mind.
